Hazen House Burned.

At 10:25 Saturday evening the fire alarm was sounded from box 72, calling the department to Pleasant street for a fire which broke out at J. B. Hazen's new bungalow. On account of some trouble with the alarm, the bell on the Opera House merely struck one blow, while the bell at the Congregational church rang all right.

There was a little more delay, as the hydrant was located by F. A. Danforth's and the hose carried by one company was not sufficient to reach the blaze but on the arrival of the second company water was turned on.

It seems that Mr. Hazen sat down in the bedroom, which is at the right of the living room, leaving the lamp turned down and went to sleep. The lamp in some way either exploded or became over turned. Mr. Hazen became unconscious and had not been for the timely arrival of Elmer Dunham, who carried him to the street, he undoubtedly would have been burned.

Mr. Dunham noticed the flame flash over the window, as he was passing by, and immediately burst in the front door and went to the bedroom, which was all ablaze and found Mr. Hazen near the door on the floor. It was only a few minutes before the flames had passed to the front of the house and the whole front portion was ablaze. After a short time the water was turned on and the fire put out.

The front portion of the house was badly burned and charred, while the remainder was badly smoked and blistered and is practically ruined.

The bungalow was built by Mr. Hazen during the past few years and he has been living in it only a short time. The house, furniture and tools were well insured through the Freeland Howe Insurance Agency.

Annual Meeting Fish & Game Association
The annual meeting of the Fish and Game Association was held at Engine House Hall, Friday evening, August 2d, and the following officers were elected:

Pres.—Albert J. Stearns.
V. Pres.—Charles Smith.
Sec.—Treas.—L. W. Waite.

Several matters pertaining to the fishing in the Lake and nearby brooks were talked over, and it was voted to see that the law relating to the killing of fish in the lake, be enforced, as the law passed by the last legislature states that a person has the privilege of killing ten bass, not less than ten inches in length, in the past few years at the lake, large numbers have been mercilessly slaughtered, many being undersized.

It was voted to have signs printed, giving an extract of the law, etc., and placed at the bridge especially, and at various points around the lake, for the benefit of the public.

It has only been a few years since fishing in the lake has been exceptionally good, and unless this law is enforced all that has been done in the past few years will be of no avail.

It was also stated that the law on the closed brooks running into the lake is not fully complied with and that many trout are caught in these brooks, contrary to law, and the Association will endeavor to see if these laws cannot be enforced.

Don't Overlook This

A Careful Perusal Will Prove Its Value to Every Advertiser Reader.

The average man is a doubter, and there is little wonder that this is so. Misrepresentations make people sceptics. Now-a-days the public ask for better evidence than the testimony of strangers. Here is proof which should convince every Advertiser reader.

W. F. Cotton, farmer, Deering street, Norway, Me., says: "I was glad to find a remedy that would cure me of kidney trouble and backache. I had suffered for a long time. Some days the trouble would be so bad I could hardly do anything. I seemed to be sore all over, and my back pained constantly. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and there was a great deal of sediment in them." Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly praised that I finally got a box, and they gave me relief right away. In a short time I was cured. # Looking Backward

In Otisfield.

In 1892, there existed in Otisfield a school district comprising twenty-nine families, nearly every one represented by children of school age.

This district extended over nearly six miles of well settled country roads. It was bounded by the Otisfield River to the north, the "Gear" Hill at Bolster's Mills, to Jeremiah Sawyer's, southward including one-third of a mile to Tarbell Patch's on the Oxford road; then from the corner near Bell Hill meeting house to Dr. Silas Blake's on the Norway road. An authentic list of the names of the scholars attending the school in the old school-house in 1892, numbers 76.

Besides these there were in many families young, unmarried men and women beyond legal school age to the number of about 25, showing a home population of about one hundred young people, averaging more than three to each of the twenty-nine families of the old Hill school.

Of the dwelling houses in that district in the year above mentioned, ten have long ago been torn down or removed, and the one fine old residence of the Johnson family, was, a few years ago destroyed by fire.

A local paper, about fifteen years ago, published in its Otisfield correspondence, the statement that the Bell Hill summer school was attended by only three pupils. This astonishing evidence of the great decrease of the rural population, which the memory of the writer induced him to make the list upon which the above statistical statement is founded, the accuracy of which was approved by two persons, native to the town and knowing the facts stated.

The remarkable changes in rural conditions in Otisfield during the last century is not exceptional. The same changes have occurred in all our country towns. It is probable that a reference to the U. S. census of the past seven decades will show that in every town in Cumberland or Oxford county the population was at its highest mark in the years between 1830 and 1850; and the present population in, the several towns # is not above two-thirds of that seventy years ago.

The big district and the old first school-house which stood only a few yards from the residence of S. L. Knight (where on the occasion of my last visit to my friend the violinist he pointed out some of the foundation stones of the ancient structure) brings vividly to the mind the forms, faces, voices and individual traits of the teacher and schoolmates of that summer term in 1832.

My first teacher was Miss Sally Knight, a young lady of tall stately form of regular handsome features, a commanding, kindly expression and a tone of voice and enunciation that echoes yet in memory like the distant tones of the old church bell on a Sabbath morning. My readers who remember my teacher of eighty years ago will approve my description of her personality and appreciate the reverent spirit that induces me to offer this grateful tribute to her memory. In character, Miss Knight was one of Nature's Noblemen. She was both a teacher and a life of service to others and bravely and patiently did she fulfill her destiny to the end.

In 1833 or 1834 the great Hill school district was divided. A part was set off to Bolster's Mills and a new district was formed including one family. (Elphaleet Wright) taken from the Wright district which had a numerous school population with a schoolhouse near the residence of G. W. Barrows, who owned and carried on a tannery located on the Sucker Brook, the country being then a swamp.

Be patient dear friends while I re-construct and restore to view the almost obsolete conditions of the dear old town. The old tannery seventy years ago one of the principal centers of business on a much traveled highway and in one of the most popular neighborhoods of town is, many years past but a tradition; the dwelling wherein dwelt successively several prominent large families, the busy tannery and shoemaker's shop obliterated including, I think the sawmill of Prof. Joseph W. Holden, one of the mills erected at different times by this enterprising citizen, all gone to decay and forgetfulness.

The little brook, which since creation has sparkled, chattered, bubbled, babbled and murmured over rocks, pebbles and sandy shallows, and erstwhile for earlier generations operated many busy mill-wheels, has for more than a generation, with one notable exception, flowed untroubled by any symptom of rural industry. Thus crudely do I chronicle the decadence of life's activities in that section of my native town.

On the formation of the new school district, a schoolhouse was built at Holdenville suitable for the seating of about forty scholars. Reuben Sampson was the contractor and the house was a novelty in schoolhouse construction, being lathed and plastered outside as well as inside.

Here, again, was Sally Knight employed in the first summer term to instruct the pupils of the new school. A subsequent term was taught by Elizabeth Knight, youngest daughter of Johnson Knight. My recollections of her as a teacher were very pleasant and my acquaintance with her as the wife of John Green, a quite near neighbor, in later years, and her sons and daughter, is one of the happiest of my life.

The youngest son and worthy successor of his honored parents on the Green homestead is George H. Green, esq., for a number of years past a resident of North Bridgton.

Another lady teacher of the new school at Holdenville was Emily Chambers, a faithful and successful instructor of the wide-awake group of boys and girls under her tuition. That was in the summer of 1837, I think. It was Miss Chambers who introduced to her grammar class the study of English composition, and I can vouch that during that term, a distinct impetus was given to the efforts of the youthful imagination in its initiation to the mysteries of Syntax.

The winter school of the short period before my removal from the district, were taught by Josiah M. Blake and Rev. Alpha Morton. About 1836 there was a high school in the autumn, of which Silas Morton was the principal. It attracted a good number of students from other parts of the town and even from other towns.

And I remember a quite famous writing school taught by Wm. H. H. Wheeler, a fine penman and competent teacher, who introduced the modern system of elegant Script capital letters and running hand. From that writing school was graduated at least one pupil, who in after years became quite distinguished as a teacher of the elegant art in several American cities and as a practical writer in commercial business and in one of the Executive departments at Washington. I refer to Grinnell B. Holden, one of my early beloved schoolmates, who died in Oxford village a few years ago.

There is much of the history of Holdenville that deserves to be commemorated in this series of sketches, and if my readers will condone my propensity to ramble from Pinhook to Pigeonville and Popple Ridge, I will endeavor to give them a meadow of reminiscences that may be worth the time spent in their perusal.

A Check Book Makes all Your Money Available at any Moment and You Can Always make the Exact Change When Paying a Bill By Check

When you carry around the currency in your pocket and laboriously count out the money every time you wish to pay a bill, there is the danger that two bills may stick together or perhaps the party you pay may lose a bill and so think you did not pay him enough. Then, too, unless you ask for a receipt each time there is always the likelihood of having to pay the same bill twice. Another inconvenience when paying money is the difficulty of making the exact change, or if you wish to send money away there is the expense of purchasing a Draft or Money Order.

By depositing your money in this Strong National Bank you make it absolutely safe from loss by robbers, fire or accident and yet it is available at any moment. Whenever you desire to use all or any part of it draw a check for the exact amount wanted and either give it or mail it to the party owed. The Bank at the end of the month returns these cancelled checks to you and each check bears the endorsement of the party you paid. By looking over your cancelled checks you can find out instantly when, what for and to whom you paid your money and each check is a receipt in itself for the bill paid.

We invite you to test the truth of these statements by opening an account at this Bank.

NORTHEAST LOVELL.

A Hot Sunday.

Sunday afternoon, July 28, I was sort of lonesome as no one seemed to come over by our house to take a short nap and about three o'clock I thought I would get up and see if there wasn't something I could do to make the long hours pass off a little quicker. I said to my mother, "I guess I'll go into the parlor and play a few pieces on the piano for amusement," but as I went through the hallway I happened to think I had better see where my father was for he had been gone a long time.

As I passed through the sitting room, I glanced out one of the East windows and to my surprise I saw two horse-back riders going past. After I had watched them awhile I went to the stable and found my father fast asleep on the hay. I called him, turned and looked out to the road and an auto was whizzing by.

They had been gone about five minutes when we saw two teams coming, one from Center and the other from Stoneham way. The one from the Center was one of our neighbors and in the other were two strangers.

They were coming down the long hill in front of our house the horse gave an unearthly kick, and just as the horse kicked one man fell out of the wagon head first into the ditch. The other man tried to rein the horse into the ditch and after a few profane words had been said between the two gentlemen the one who had fallen got up while the other had got out of the wagon. By this time my mother and the other team had reached them.

They asked what the trouble was and if the horse was afraid of the auto which they had just passed and one said in a hideous way, "the haint afraid of a d-a-m thing, 'cause the trouble is with us," and I know the other people thought he told the truth.

Father said, "Is there anything we can do for you?"

No, one said, "I guess not, if we get home we'll do well."

Father picked up their whip for them and was thanked very politely.

They had one thrill broken and how long it had been so was unknown, but they started to go on and one man acted as though he was going to get out, but he didn't have reason enough to know that day whether he was or not.

They passed Mr. Eastman's home by letting the horse go about as he thought best. When they reached the watering trough they stopped. One man got out, went up to the fence, broke off a piece of stake, took his horse's halter and his handkerchief and tied on to the broken thill and started for their home which is between Sweden and Bridgton.

Two such men as they were and in the way they were last Sunday, are not fit to drive and abuse a horse and use themselves in such a way. Who ever sold or gave them the intoxicating drink which they had had that day ought to be fined and put in prison and kept there until Roosevelt is elected. President again. It's a disgrace to the public to have such men on the streets.

Joseph Andrews' Letters.

No. XV.

The Farrington tourist hotel and cottages makes an ideal summer home for those financially able to enjoy its hospitality. Located on the sandy plain, high and dry and supplied by the purest water, and shaded by the largest forest trees many of them stately and historic pine, Maine's emblem tree, close by, row, bath, or back in the warm sunshine upon the sandy beach. It makes an ideal resting place for those who wish to escape the heat and turmoil of the cities crowded streets and find rest and quiet amid rural scenes.

Following up the fine new automobile and carriage way to the public road, I came to the old Chaucer Chandler homestead now owned and occupied by his son Will ever since his father's death long years ago. Will has kept his shoulder to the wheel and with the help of the growing pine has made the old farm pay. He has never married and I believe that most of the time since his mother's death he has kept "Old Bachelor's Hall" but at the time of my visit he had a housekeeper and everything about the home looked "spic and span" as only a woman's hand could do. Mr. Chandler was one of my younger school-boy mates and I was glad to find him looking so well and prosperous.

At the old Stephen and later James Outler Stearns home which was burned a few years ago, I found Reginald Pottle, son of Albanus Pottle and son-in-law of Outler Stearns, who now owns the old homestead. He was quietly sleeping in a new house which he had built to take the place of the one burned. They have two small children Mildred a sister of Mrs. Pottle was spending the summer with them. I also had the pleasure of meeting an old friend, Mr. Marilla Hatch nee McDaniels, of Fryeburg, who was visiting there, but amid all the pleasant and kindly presence of my dear old friend and schoolmate James Outler Stearns, who was quietly sleeping beneath the sod beside his life's companion who had preceded him but a few short years before.

Climbing the Stearns, Heald, Hatch, Pottle Hill I was soon at home with Deacon Albanus Pottle and his wife Mary, nee Heald, both old-time friends and schoolmates. Mr. Pottle was not only an old schoolmate but we were boon companions and many a night did we spend together at the old mill brook dipping smelts from its limpid waters with a long handled dip net, and wading the icy waters in search of the elusive sucker. Pottle's Hill looks much as it did fifty and sixty years ago, when Deacon Stearns and Silas Heald and their good wives and growing up children were a good strong part of the backbone of the religious and social circles that gathered within the little church and schoolhouse down on the level plain below.

The old homestead farmhouse now owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Pottle must have been built about 1829. It was built by or for Rev. Valentine Little, the first settled Congregational pastor of Lovell. And by vote of the town he was given the right to the land, set apart by the terms of the grant to the first settled minister in Lovell. The parsonage study occupied by Rev. Little remains the same as when he left it 80 years ago, even to the pictures pasted or left hanging on the wall. Mr. Pottle was the son of Rev. John Pottle of Lovell. He married first Nellie Heald and lived for many years on the Heald farm. He has three children, two of whom live elsewhere and the other one Reginald, already spoken of. Some years after the death of his first wife he married Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Heald, who like a good girl had stayed at home and cared for her father and mother in their declining years. Here in their quiet pleasant home they are passing the evening of their lives in peace and comfort.

Ernest Hatch, son of Samuel Hatch, and grandson of Dea. Stearns, is living on the old Stearns homestead, which has changed but little by the passing years. And with the farm adjoining remains a lasting monument to the memory of the sturdy pioneers who turned a howling wilderness of hill, rock and forest, unto into an earthly paradise. Joseph Stearns once told me that he once took a party of visitors that he had brought from the top of this hill and they declared that the magnificent view which they beheld was the finest that they had seen in any land. Here as in other places I found a vacant chair, one with which I had enjoyed short visits on each of my former visits. Samuel Hatch who had answered the last roll call, and had passed beyond the silent river of death.

Health the Subject.

The native Moor are not content with the salutations which pass muster with English when acquaintances are met in the street. "Hello, old man! How are you? Going strong—that's right. So long!" This sort of thing does not commend itself to the Moroccan.

Here is the kind of conversation, says Health Culture, that takes place at every meeting of any two friends or acquaintances, say Mr. Abd'l-Kahder and Mr. Booi-Hamara:

"Peace be with you this morning."
"And with you be peace."
"How do you do?"
"Without any ill."
"Are you well?"
"Thank Allah!"
"And is your health good?"
"It is good."
"And you have no ill in your body?"
"I have none."
"And your bones, how are they?"
"They are indeed strong."
"And your little bones?"
"There is no ill to them."
"And the marrow in your bones, is it well?"
"And your limbs, are they well?"
"They are sound, praise be the prophet."
"And the whole of your body, is it well?"
"It is well."
"And your forehead, how is it this morning?"
"By your life, truly it is well."
"And how is your nose?"
"It is free from any harm, I am grateful to you."
"And your ears, are they well?"
"They are well, may the prophet be blessed."
"And so on and so forth, until almost every part of the human system has been alluded to."

A class of 22 candidates received the degree of Pomona, the ceremony of which was conducted with conspicuous ability by Working Master Henry Hillson and his assistants, the assistant steward and lady assistant steward. The exercises of the noon recess were performed in the dining hall and of the gustatory order in which the sisters of the home grange maintained their good reputation as caterers to the cultivated tastes of the Oxford Pomona.

Lecturer McIntire presented the following program: O worship the Lord, choir; Overture, Packard's orchestra; Reading, The Skippy's automobile ride, Alice Hamilton; Glee, Baritone solo, Walter Parker; Encore.

Address by Dr. Leon S. Merrill, Dean of the State College of Agriculture. This pertained to the functions of the Experiment station, the teaching of the why and how of correct farming; what the Agricultural colleges are doing, etc.

"Too little money," said Dr. Merrill, "is available from the State."

He described the various forms of instructional work, correspondence course, reading course, and extension work. The wonderful development of crop raising in the South by boys, boys and girls' clubs and their introduction to Maine was treated of interestingly.

An important part of the college is the identification of weeds, injurious insects and plant diseases. Demonstration farms in counties and towns owned by the State or by individual farmers was advocated.

"Agriculture," declared Dr. Merrill, "is to become the greatest business ever known." His address was loudly applauded.

Soprano song, Happy days, Encore, Bright eyes, Ethel Monroe.

Address by Hon. W. F. Guptill, in which he explained his philosophy of intellectual development. His remarks were enlightening and were warmly cheered. Male duet, I'd love in Loveland with a little girl like, by Michael Kennedy and Walter Parker.

They are skilled in piscatorial arts, having had many seasons' experience among the best sections of New England.

The Sunday evening church service at Union church is rendered very interesting to the unusually large congregations attending by the order of exercises consisting of Doxology; invocation; reading lesson from Service book; hymns by choir from "Joy and Praise," a new book of delightful sacred songs; Scripture reading by pastor; prayer; anthem from "Triumphal March," a fine anthem collection, mostly original compositions of Fred A. Fillmore and published by Fillmore Brothers, New York and Cincinnati; discourse by pastor. Last Sunday the subject was taken from the 23d Psalm and was an interesting description of the customs of shepherd life said to be existent in Palestine in this day.

A pleasing and instructive entertainment followed in the introduction of two series of magic lantern views on a large screen, illustrating the 23d Psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd," and "The parable of the Good Samaritan, Luke 10, 30-37." The exhibition was made impressive by appropriate descriptions by the pastor.
